

Camp Director Speaks Without Using Megaphone

A hand-written note was found in the Record office late Thursday evening. There was no name on it, but reliable sources say it came from none other than Phyllis Swartz!

If she really had a message for campers, why would she leave an anonymous note in the newspaper office rather than just using the megaphone like she did all week? Could it be that wisecrack yesterday about her being technically challenged?

"A Good-bye to Choral Campers"

You've crawled into my heart his week. I've watched you sing and play and work and eat and sleep. I've seen some of you who were homesick at night come to breakfast with big smiles. I've seen you pray with each other and hug each other and pound each other on the basketball court. I've seen you worship in chapel and at campfires.

I love your pigtails and crew cuts and freckles and grins.

So it's no wonder you crawled into my heart.

I will miss you.

I hope to see you at Choral Camp 2004.

—Phyllis Swartz (supposedly)

“I have a secret I am not supposed to tell . . . (sees staffer) . . . I’ll tell you later”
—Young camper to friends at the lunch table

Pizza Tops List of Favorites

This morning the statistical division of the Record asked a random sample of campers and staffers, “What was your favorite food served in the cafeteria this week?” The following results are without error, as far as the editor can determine:

- | | |
|--------------------|----------------|
| Pizza - 29 | Spaghetti - 10 |
| Spicy Chicken - 8 | All of it - 5 |
| Mac and Cheese - 5 | Taco Salad - 5 |
| Garlic Bread - 2 | Pancakes - 3 |
| Sausage - 2 | Hamburgers - 2 |

Single mention was also made of frozen bananas, muffins, cake, hot dogs, and mashed potatoes with gravy.

Apparently the pretzels were more fun to wear than to eat!

“I never knew a recorder could make a nice sound”
—Guest Kristin Showalter, when she heard Andrea Gingerich playing

“These kids are lethal!”

Jared: “What’s musical and handy in a supermarket?” Brittany: “A Chopin Lizst.”
