Wednesday's Skate Relieves Need For Speed

Since the inception of Choral Camp, some campers and counselors alike have had an obsession with going fast. Others, however, prefer a more leisurely style. Christopher Jarman, a roller-skater with hours of experience from journeys along his driveway and sidewalk said, “I didn’t go fast because I had skates. It was good, though.”

Alexandra Reed, who chose rollerblades for her outing, said, “I didn’t go very fast. Only almost speed-skater speed because Pink Hat held my hand.” The Record was unable to obtain an interview with the elusive Pink Hat, supposedly a being native to roller rinks whose sole purpose is to assist skaters in achieving “almost speed-skater” speeds.

Many, however, were on their own without Pink Hat’s assistance and displayed their speedy prowess in the races. Winners celebrated their victories by downing beverages from the soda fountain, apparently a necessary accessory to any skating outing.

The proof, then, is clear: Choral Camp is not just a place for people who love music. It is also a place for people who like to go fast. “Almost speed-skater fast!”

Power Shower Times Getting Lower

Once every night, near bedtime, campers of all ages run through the dorms like little chipmunks being chased by large-toothed Spanish bulls. But these campers aren’t running away from anything but, rather, to something— the showers.

Phyllis Swartz was shocked when she heard about boys in Bach Hall eagerly lining up for showers and yelling, “I’m getting a head start!” as they lathered up their hair before they even got to the shower. Both boys’ halls held competitions between campers to see who could shower the fastest. Some claim to have finished showers in only thirty seconds!

Counselors say it helps to have the showers remain running while campers jump in and out. Bekah Cloud stated that in order to improve efficiency in her hall, girls were washing their hair in the sinks!

As the competition heats up, inventive campers are becoming inspired to create new-and-improved, speed-increasing techniques. What will you come up with?

Best Hall — Mozart

Most Improved Hall — Strauss

Least Best Hall — Beethoven
(As are the counselors' rooms, so is the hall!)

Talk to TORO!

Dear Toro,

My mom must have packed this little brush thingy in my suitcase. Do you have any idea what it's for?

Puzzled

Dear Puzzled,

Having your mother pack your suitcase is a mixed blessing. You probably came to camp with everything you need this way, but you also have the things you would rather have an excuse not to use.

Take this brush thingy, for example. I hate to tell you, but you are supposed to use it to brush your teeth any number of times per day, depending on the mom. Some moms put brushing teeth right up there with taking baths, telling the truth, and going to church.

In your case, since you don't seem to recognize the instrument, I'm guessing you could get away with using it once or twice and then loaning it out to some other camper. Most moms really like to see their kids share. She'll be proud of you.

Thanks for asking. —EL TORO

You Said It!

“I knew you had minions!”

—Caitie Yoder to Phyllis Swartz, after another camper removed the big pink hat from her head, achieving something Phyllis has been attempting for years.

“I love that smell—it's the smell of no school.”

— Rachel Miller, as the hayride passed through evening air heavy with the scent of pollinating corn
