The Agony and the Ecstasy

Creams are one of the signature features of Choral Camp, and yesterday's cream met with enthusiasm. Campers pledged to avoid head collisions and other reckless behavior, but that left open a lot of possibilities for fun.

The Record proudly presents the following sample of the smiles produced by this year's cream. Not pictured are the occasional grimaces produced in this strange, sci-fi world where gravity exists, but there is no friction.

"It was the best of times, it was the worst of times" Choral Camp teachers remember – a series

It's hard to get Regina Yutzy-Wolfer to slow down. She radiates an aura of controlled energy; you can see it in her eyes and hear it in her voice when she's teaching campers how to use the hand chimes. The Record did manage to catch up with her one afternoon and ask her about her favorite Choral Camp memories.

"It's just about those 'aha!' moments when the light goes on," she said. During the first week of camp, a person in her class looked at her and said, "You know, Mrs. Wolfer, that triad stuff - it's really cool. It's like science!"

The 'aha!' moments happen every time she teaches, said Regina. She attributes this to the way campers are doing music all week long. "They experience the music in a different way," she said. "Some kids have only sung it or heard it."

Picking up the hand chimes and manipulating sound helps some campers think about music in a new, aha!-inducing way, and Regina enjoys being there to see the light go on in their eyes.

July 18, 2007 Talk to TORO!

Dear Toro,

What is the best way to get shaving cream out of my ears? Stuffed Up Camper

Dear Stuffed, What a fascinating question! Um, you didn't mention why you were trying to shave your ears—most people don't have to worry about hairy ears until they are a bit older—but since the cream is already in there, I'll try to answer your question.

Dr. Dawson Hooley of the maintenance department at RBC, confidently claims that pouring warm olive oil in your ear will soothe the ache and replace the cream. He didn't mention how to get the oil out.

Pastor Elmer Miller claims that he places his fingers in front of the little ear flaps on the side of his face, and presses in hard. The cream just squirts right out!

If nothing else works, you might try hanging upside down while someone shoots a water pistol gently into your ear. Thanks for asking. —EL TORO Need some bullish advice? Write your question or problem on a slip of paper addressed to Toro, and drop it in the Record box in the cafeteria.

The Record caught Phyllis Swartz, alleged coordinator of the entire camp, fleeing down the sidewalk, hotly pursued by a young camper. "I didn't do anything to her," Swartz said defensively, "It was a game of jump rope."
