Donkeys are loud! Their bray can be heard over 3 kilometers away (almost 2 miles). But they're still very cute. Don't you want one?

The Record's investigative team has uncovered a super-secret plot by Choral Camp music teachers.

Choir director and TAP teacher Ken Miller was overheard muttering bitterly, "Every year it's the same old thing...the campers and counselors and hall leaders get to play on those giant balloon things, but do we ever get to? No! It's not fair!"

Hicham's overseas brethren overworked, but in high demand

By Caleb Zimmerman

As our adorable donkey mascot basks in the full Choral Camp spotlight, let's not forget Hicham's hardworking relatives across the world.

For centuries these passive creatures have not enjoyed the kind of celebrity appeal that Hicham has wallowed in thus far at camp, and therefore I feel it very advantageous to draw campers' attention to Albania.

In this beautiful beach-lined nation, I

Jealous Music Teachers Plan Hostile Super Games Take-Over

Details discovered in secret classroom code

Miller then emitted an ominous cackle and said to no one in particular "Well, THIS year it's going to be different!"

Communicating by high-tech radio and secret codes, music teachers are hatching a plan to force their way onto the Super Games inflatables and keep the campers off.

An intercepted message read, "It's our turn now...and we're going to do whatever we have to do to get on that football dude."

Record reporter and secret agent Ryan Graber cracked the code on Mrs.

Yutzy-Wolfer's wall that broke the story.

"They tell you it's just quarter notes and eighth notes, but there's a whole language in there," Graber said.

When the Record asked about her code, Yutzy-Wolfer said, "You can't prove I'm in on it... and, um, I mean, there's nothing for me to be in on anyway...in fact, I'm not even here now."

Yutzy-Wolfer then hid behind two chairs and pretended she was not there.

have seen firsthand the incredible amount of work and hardship that donkeys endure day after day after day, often being piled like ants with loads 3 to 4 times their size!!

In a country that is almost tractorless, they are thanklessly relied upon to provide much of the rural population with food and transportation. Instead of dealing with the paparazzi like Hicham, Albanian donkeys must often carry their owners and other passersby on top of a huge pile of hay or grain.

This sadly may be the first time any animal of Hicham's kind has ever enjoyed such pampering, and we, therefore, must do our best to make Hicham's unique situation even more momentous. It will stand in the annals of history as the week that donkeys ruled the world.

The following sentence is from this story, only written in Albanian. Can you tell which one it is?

Sikur gomari jonë e bukur shkellqen nën të gjitha dritët të Kampit Koral, le të mos harrojmë vëllezërit punëtor të Hichamit që gjejmë rreth botës.

Sabotaged! By the girls!!!

Innocent boy campers, blissfully unaware of the horror that awaits them—no warm showers!

Bitterness from their failed scheme to beat the boys to Lights Out last night provoked female members of camp to new heights of aggravation and cruelty. Yesterday morning, female dissenters made sure to ruin the Get Wet event for all Lights Out champions from the boys' dorm.

Sneaking stealthily near the cafeteria, they wreaked havoc on the sewer connecting to the dorm. The bathrooms and water fountains ground to a halt, causing mild panic.

The plan's success grew as the morning remained colder than usual, making everyone long for the warm showers at the end of the fight. The boys were horrified, however, to discover that all male counselors had been told to wash male campers with frigid hose water instead. Gasps of air and high-pitched screams were heard from many a young gentleman as he worked to rid himself of soap and grass.

The culprits, overcome with remorse, pleaded that their names not be disclosed, promising that they would make up for their evil deeds. All eyes will be on them today, as the camp waits expectantly for whatever the evildoers will offer as a token of their sincerity.

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Disco balls glittered, lights flashed, and four-part harmonies blasted from speakers, while thousands of wheels spun around the rink as hundreds of Choral Campers and counselors wheeled their way through the air. Some counselors were rather impressive on their speedy skates; others weren't so impressive on skates, but made up for it in sheer coolness. Said one camper as he flew gracefully down the rink, "Wheeee!" No statement could be truer.
