Thinking positive at choral camp

Choral campers keep their cool in heat

ROSEDALE, Ohio -- It takes more than 96 degrees of central Ohio sunshine to make our campers wilt.

As a matter of fact, once word got out that Choral Campers were pretty much heat-proof, a surprise visitor showed up—none other than Frosty the Snowman.

The well known "jolly old soul" left his corn cob pipe behind, because, he said, "Everyone knows Choral Camp is smokefree."

When we asked where his old silk hat was, he said he traded it in for a conical straw hat. "This look works better for me," he said. Frosty enjoyed Choral Camp Cream, letting two young women do his hair (below) and rejoicing with the guys when they won the slide race.

In spite of campers' positive thinking, the sun really was hot. Frosty called out, "Let's run and we'll have some fun now before I melt away!"

Campers tried to keep Frosty cool, spraying him with the hose (not to a good idea). Said one camper, commenting on Frosty's mysterious disappearance, "I don't know what happened. He was here one minute, smearing shaving cream all over my back, and the next thing I knew, he was gone!"

T-shirts, T-shirts everywhere! And what comes next?

By Karissa Brenneman

Campers got new T-shirts on Tuesday! There's a lot of hunter green going around camp. Here's what campers think about the color:

"Really good!"

"Should be brighter."

"Beast."

"Awesome."

"It's my favorite."

"It will be hard to see writing."

Campers also suggested that next year the T-shirts should be glow-in-the-dark or tie-dye. Camp Coordinator Debbie said, "That's a good idea, actually.

Especially tie dye."

A poll reveals that an overwhelming 93% of campers think we should use tie dye. Maybe camp will be extra colorful next year.

Overheard!

Impressed camper:
"He can lick his
