Itowaways discovered at Choral Camp!

A surprising discovery was made this week at Choral Camp. Many of Paco's international friends stowed away in the campers' luggage to see him and enjoy a week at Choral Camp. The animals were having a great time with Paco and the other friends, but some stealthy nurses discovered them sleeping in yesterday morning while the campers were at chapel. Collette is unsure of how to address the unregistered (unexpected?) campers: "We love to welcome everyone here at Choral Camp, but we didn't prepare for all of Paco's friends!"

P.S. FYI: The boys' hall had representation too, The whale, the puppy on the tractor pillow, and the panda were all from the boys' hall.

The pictures on the right have caused some concern at camp. To clear things up, we asked our resident experts what they thought was going on in these photos.

Ashton Seney: "I think they're opening the bananas because the little kids can't. And they're eating them because the other kids won't."

Benjamin Ramsey: "They're illegally praising the banana."

Dylan Pardy and Zeke Peterson think they look like priests who are sacrificing bananas, but Ezra Miller said, "I think they're celebrating bananas."

Pierce Wenger had a lengthier explanation: "I assume they are from a parallel universe, and in that universe, somewhere, at some unknown time, something changed."

This change resulted in the development of a complex religious process, involving special clothing, secret rituals, and the ceremonial eating of the banana. Pierce said much more, and said it more eloquently than this, but we're out of room!
