Cengiz and the White Witch

By AnnaStasia Yoder

One day Cengiz was exploring a mansion and came upon an incredible wardrobe. Being a curious sheep and an avid wool fanatic, he stepped inside to scope it out. Cengiz went from coat to coat; some were bushy and others were fluffy, but as he went deeper into the wardrobe, the coats became bristly.

Cengiz tripped over a log (!) and fell into a pile of snow. He was surprised until he saw a lamppost with a sign on it that read “Narnia.” This made sense to him because his uncle had been an outer-world explorer and shared many tales at Thanksgiving. Cengiz was just getting used to the snow when he heard a tinkling sound.

He squinted into the white nothingness. Slowly, a white sleigh came into view, with a pale, stately lady in it. She was dressed grandly, all in white, and had an imperial demeanor. Cengiz spoke with her and the friendly dwarf at her side, and accepted their invitation to climb into the sleigh.

The pale lady treated the little sheep with much kindness. After about an hour, the sleigh began to slow down, but Cengiz didn’t notice because the dwarf had offered him some Turkish Delight. Cengiz loved Turkish Delight! He ate and ate and ate and ate. Soon He was even rounder than usual and he became sleepy.

The lady whispered to the dwarf, Humperdinck. All of a sudden, Humperdinck jumped on Cengiz and began to wrap him up in rope. Shocked, Cengiz realized that the lady, whom he now knew was a white witch, wore a coat of pure, white wool.

“They want to take my coat and leave me freezing in the snow!” he thought. He bleated loudly – baaa-aa – and thrashed wildly back and forth. Because he was so rotund, it was very hard for Humperdinck to keep holding him.

Cengiz flew out of the dwarf’s hands with a “POP” and fell into the snow.

Wasting no time, he scrambled away, running until he came to the lamppost and the wardrobe filled with trees. He threw himself into the trees and tumbled out onto the floor in the mansion.

After calming himself and meditating on how much he now hated Turkish Delight, Cengiz resolved to forever stay nice and round, for this is what had saved him from the White Witch.

Harless, Alayna Schrader, Adalie Stauffer

Strauss's Blue Danube Waltz: Room 6

Katya Bowles, Katelynn Ebersole,
Sarah Hostetler, Lillie Kochenderfer

A poem from Mozart, Rm. 3

Nurses are angels
without any wings,
They're always doing
Such wonderful things.
So when you next see them
Raise your mug,
Or simply run up and give them a hug.
