Making room for Mamo!

I love the library at Choral Camp! They gave me my very own carrel!

Top: Before he knew he had his very own carrel at the library, Mamo went to the reading room to read. However, his book was too big. Fortunately, Mayah Kauffman and Malia Bucher were there to help him out. Middle: Librarian Reuben Sairs reserved a carrel for Mamo and gave him a reading list. Here, he explores the book Insects. Bottom left: The library has lifted its no food & drinks policy for Mamo. Right: Mamo enjoys his new library carrel.

ROSEDALE -- When it came to Reuben Sairs' attention that hyenas are smart (Duke University says so—see the note at the top of this page), he sprang into action.

Reuben is the director of library services at Rose-dale Bible College (RBC), where Choral Camp takes place every year. As everyone knows (just ask Dr. Who), libraries are noble places, and RBC's library is no exception.

Reuben explained his rapid response to the news that Mamo, Choral Camp's very own hyena, was in need of some mental stimulation. "Librarians take great pride in serving all populations who seek information," he said. "Hyenas are new to Central Ohio, but I think there is an opportunity here."

He did some research (that's what librarians do) and discovered that, according to Animal Planet's Wild Kingdom, "in addition to scouring other predators' meals, hyenas will eat lizards, birds, snakes and insects."

He set up a private carrel for Mamo and even came up with some reading suggestions for him. "We have here in the library field guides that might be helpful when seeking good hyena dining. I hope we can also provide comfortable seating, and lift our no food & drinks in the library policy for hyenas. They are animals, after all."

Campers, when you go into the library, look for the guy hiding in the office to the right, behind the window. You'll know him right away; he looks just the way a librarian should, surrounded by books!

Learning to play the recorder—not as easy as you might think!

Q. Why are pianos so noble?
A. Many are upright and the rest are grand.
