The Andean condor lives a lo-oooo-oong time; some have lived over 70 years! And it's big. Its wings can measure up to 10 feet, 10 inches, tip to tip.

THE GREAT GRAPE PUDDING CHALLENGE!

Grapes! Is there anything they can't do? Well, probably a lot of things. But campers, you can find a recipe! Can you make the pudding? Hmmm . . .

By Anna Gaertner

All Choral campers enjoy the food that the dear cook Stephanie prepares. She gives it her all to please everyone!

But one important item is missing from this week's menu; it seems that no one even remembers its existence.

Grape pudding—sweet, tart, fluffy and magical.

When Stephanie was asked about the pudding, she replied: "I don't remember."

This is sad, sad news to the ears of the Choral campers. What will camp do with no grape pudding?

URGENT UPDATE!

The Record spoke with dear cook Stephanie about this. Here is her response: "If the campers come up with a recipe, supply the ingredients, and make it themselves—well, then we can have grape pudding!"

Are You sleeping, are You sleeping, Sister Claire?

By Anna Gaertner

It was a typical Tuesday morning at Choral Camp: counselors waking up the campers, campers rushing to get ready, everything running smoothly, until . . . one camper would not wake up.

Nothing would make her budge. Counselors piled in her room, yelling her name: "Claire, Claire, Claire!"

Yet not a peep came from Claire's mouth. Campers had already begun to go to breakfast, but one—only one—camper girl REFUSED to budge.

The counselors tried everything in their power, yet this mission seemed impossible. Finally, after an excruciating 1,800 seconds, Claire arose. She arrived at breakfast, but was she even awake? No one knows . . . Her counselors saw utter sleepiness when they looked in her eyes. Rumor has it that Claire didn't fully wake up until choir rehearsal.

Counselor Lauren Hertzler and roommates Gloria Friesen and Piper Lowery do their best to wake up sleepyhead Claire Troyer in this extremely convincing reenactment of Tuesday morning's event.
