Campers, Stay Alert—Protect Our Flatware!

By Madalyn Schrader

Earlier this week, the esteemed Order of the Forks delivered the news that Choral Camp is experiencing a sudden and mysterious fork shortage. Since then, news has surfaced that other utensils may be in danger as well.

We first heard this news yesterday morning, when Jon Luke Blanton rushed into the kitchen clutching a broken spoon in his hand. “I was enjoying my breakfast, minding my own business, when suddenly I saw it—a spoon that had been snapped clean in half!” he shared, frantically waving the pieces of spoon in the air. “Look at it—it’s been beheaded!”

Various members of our hardworking crew gathered around him, excitedly offering their thoughts (some logical and some insane) on how this could have happened. “A spoon murdering camper?” “It was probably an accident!” “Could this be the work of a superhuman?” “Maybe it was just an old spoon!”

Although Thursday’s incident remains the only case of a broken spoon, Camp Coordinator Erin Yoder suggests that campers stay on high alert. “We must all do our part to keep our silverware safe and intact,” she declared.

“Campers must do their part!”

While some of the more imaginative staff members remain convinced of superhuman strength at play, others think differently. Cook Stephanie Jones’s conclusion? “Campers, you’re mightier than you think! Go easy on them!”
