Attempted Poisoning on Beethoven Hall??!

By Madalyn Schrader

First-time camper Ben Miller moved onto Beethoven Hall on Monday, looking forward to a happy and healthy week of camp.

What he saw, however, alarmed him—a hall decorated with his nemesis: pineapple. “I’m super allergic to pineapple,” he explained. “Whenever I eat it, my throat closes up and I can’t breathe!”

This information caused several staff and campers to question the true purpose behind Beethoven’s pineapple-themed hall. Is something sinister going on behind the hall’s cheerful decorations? Did Jared, Connor, and Caleb—Beethoven’s Hall Leaders—intentionally create this minefield of danger?

The three maintain their innocence, but others have their theories.

Alayna Schrader shared insider knowledge from years of friendship with Connor. “I’ve always known he had a sinister side,” she admitted. “I just never thought it could come out at camp.” She further confided that she fears for her own safety. “Ben is my third cousin—are they plotting to kill off my family? Am I next?!”

Camp Director Kirk Kauffman was skeptical that Beethoven’s leaders would attempt to poison a camper, but didn’t take the option off the table. “I’m committed to keeping our campers safe and un-poisoned, and I’m willing to open up an investigation to get to the bottom of it!”

What does Ben think about all this? “I think a poisoning plot involving decorations is a little too sophisticated for those three,” he maintains. “I’m willing to believe it was an honest mistake.”
