A “Family,” a (God)father, and Organized Crime:

By Sierra Coblentz

Tuesday's schedule was a tough one to beat with Camp Cream in the morning and a hayride to a lively hoedown concert in the evening. But on Wednesday campers had the “cool” experience of going off campus to do some ice skating. What a spectacular activity! Everyone on campus joined in the fun for ice skating. Or so we thought!

One has to wonder why every camper and counselor was asked to leave campus. The Crew and their nefarious Crew Chiefs remained on campus while everyone else was away! Would it be reasonable to assume that the crew was up to something? Just what do they really do behind the scenes anyway? It can only be assumed there was great scheming against the rest of the camp.

When asked about this, counselor Jon Luke had responded, “I think this could be a conspiracy of the highest degree.” Record reporters concurred, and set out to conduct interviews with the Crew themselves and their beloved Crew Chiefs to uncover the truth. Crew Chief Caleb Eicher defends himself, “If you call Camp Cream, Get Wet, and good food nefarious, then we are guilty.” Either Mr. Eicher is telling the truth or he is covering up their ulterior motives.

Crew member Isaac Showalter wryly commented, “I may or may not have taken anything.” With reports of missing items—clothes, goggles and shoes, it may be safe to assume that Mr. Showalter and perhaps some of his scheming sidekicks are to blame.

After careful and thorough sluthing in an effort to get to the bottom of things, we have come to the shocking conclusion that the Crew is extremely close, even going so far as to call themselves ‘family’. The Crew members lovingly refer to their chiefs as “Mom and Dad”. Regardless of whether Eicher and McGaffey are leading their Crew into a family lifestyle of organized crime or are actually teaching them valuable lessons, it is clear that the Crew will follow Eicher and McGaffey until their last breaths. Or until this week of camp is over.
