Possible Stolen Identity on Campus

Choral Camp '23 began normally Monday morning. In front of the student center, the bright flags waved to campers checking in.

The empty spaces began to fill with color, voices and energy. And in the choir room, Ken and his crew of choir directors introduced the new songs to this year's music enthusiasts. Choral Camp was here, and everything was going just right.

Or was it?

While campers sat innocently in that first choir, the great and fearless camp director Kirk received a frantic text:

"We may have a case of stolen identity at camp!! But what's more.....there's three people who stole it!"

Confused and concerned, Kirk began to investigate the situation right away. After conferring with several other members of the honorable Choral Camp leadership team, the story came out. Right here, on Rosedale's campus, four different individuals are all claiming to be "the original Megan."

While Choral Camp certainly can have four different Megans on campus, only one can truly be the "original" one. Ken, Rosedale's brilliant mathematician, laid it out for Kirk and Liz.

"If four individuals are all staking claim to the title "original," it stands to reason we can conclude that only one is telling the truth and the other three are blatantly attempting to steal that Megan's identity!" In other words, three people are lying to us about who they really are!

After Ken's stark statement, questions arise. Why are they lying to us about who they are? Who is actually telling the truth? Who is really "the original Megan?" And can we know for sure?

To make matters even more complicated, our very own program director is a Megan herself! When Kirk confronted her about the situation, she grew deeply distressed.

"I am the original Megan!" she said emphatically. "I wouldn't lie about my own identity!"

While we certainly want to trust her words, does that mean our other Megans—like the courageous crew chief—are lying to us instead?

Campers, we need your help! If all of us try to get to the bottom of this, maybe we can discover who the original Megan really is. Report any clues to the Rosedale Record staff as soon as you can!
