The Invisible Artist Strikes Again!

Camp Staff have been reporting the handiwork of an Invisible Artist. The Record has the scoop. The sightings began Monday afternoon and have continued constantly until the time this article went to press.

"This never ceases to amaze me," said Administrative Assistant Becka Brenneman. "Look in the library, right now!"

I quickly move in to see this art that's causing all the fuss. My eyes see a roomful of campers, choir books in hand. I look around for the art—where is it?

Choir director Jared Stutzman deftly moves his hands, and the choir bursts into song: "I'm gonna lay down my sword and shield, down by the riverside, down by the riverside... study war no more."

The sound of so many voices blended in such rich harmonies—with such powerful expression. The way the choir comes together in song is art... pure art! I'm deeply moved.

I look around for the artist. Is it Jared? He's working at it, for sure, but I get the feeling he's the paintbrush. If Jared is the brush, is the artist the choir? Each camper and counselor sings with a beautiful voice. Their smiles and personalities add all kinds of beauty and wonder, but I get the feeling they are the paint.

The Artist—the one who created every vibrant color of camper and guides the director's hands—remains just out of sight. But as I sit and take in the music, I feel the Artist's presence in the room. I feel the warmth of His smile.
