The Mysterious Mascot

The Choral Camp mascot has turned out to be a phantom. I asked worship Pastor Keith Byler, "Have you seen the mascot?"

"What mascot?" he said. "Is there one?"

I eyed Keith with suspicion. Outside, a camper had tipped me off that they thought Keith was the mascot! But how would I know the truth?

Then I saw him: a penguin, but he was twice as tall as Keith and only half as funny.

"Hey, Pop!" I yelled. "Could you tell us what state you come from?" I thought I could identify who was inside if I could get him to talk. He did not take the bait.

Pop only pointed toward the culture class with one floppy wing. Instantly, I knew what he meant.

Culture class is all about ice and Antarctica. Pop wasn't from around here.

I tried to reach the culture class teacher, Megan Greenwell, for comment, but she was out picking ice. Camp Director Liz said, "Pop is not a phantom; he just needs his ice baths to stay cool in Ohio. He is a long way from home."

Still, some campers claimed to see Pop on the hayride.

"It looked like he was trying to hitchhike to Antarctica," said a camper in the yellow-orange-red group.

"But I saw Pop climb into a van," commented a camper in the green-blue-black group, "we were sure he was headed back to camp!"

What do you think? Has Pop gone north for good, or will he reappear at camp? Is Pop truly a giant penguin? If not, who is inside that plastic suit?
